MUSEUM TOWER

Director of sales hired for project

Developers of the proposed Museum Tower condo project in Dallas' Arts District are adding to their marketing efforts. The 42-story residential tower will be built on a vacant downtown tract across the street from the Nasher Sculpture Center.

Museum Tower builders said this week that they have hired Bobby Dhillon as director of sales for the luxury residential project. Dhillon previously worked in sales for the Residences at the Mandarin Oriental project in Atlanta. Before that, he did sales and marketing for the Residences at the Ritz-Carlton in Dallas.

Groundbreaking for Museum Tower has been delayed, but the developers are seeking buyers for the project.

DISTRIBUTION

Dawson Logistics moves into Garland

Dawson Logistics, an Illinois warehousing firm, leased 40,000 square feet of space at 1036 S. Jupiter Road in Garland for its logistics, fulfillment and distribution operations. Company president and chief executive Doug Dawson said the new Dallas-area operation is "providing ground delivery service to the majority of the nation within three business days."
